Adult Field Services

Dataset Overview and Source

The Alameda County Probation Department (ACPD) collects and records information on its clients in the Tyler Supervision Case Management System (“Tyler Supervision”), which was implemented for Adult Field Services in January 2019, representing a significant improvement in the Department’s case management and data collection abilities. The reports contain individual-level information for all adults on the ACPD caseload on the date specified. To create this dataset, the report was de-identified and edited to include the most pertinent information.

Data Characteristics and Known Limitations

- To ensure confidentiality and to protect the identities of individuals on probation, the ages of some individuals in the dataset have been withheld, and marked “N/A”. This is done to avoid possible re-identification through the available demographic information, or stigmatization of a group when they make a substantial percent of a designated population. Please see the “Notes” tab in the public dataset file, which states the number of records with withheld ages in that dataset.
- Along with the upgrade of the Department’s case management system to Tyler Supervision, ACPD implemented a clean-up effort of data that was migrated from the previous system into Tyler Supervision. Due to the migration and data clean up, some fluctuation of population numbers is possible around the time of the conversion (early 2019) and for several months afterwards.
- The system upgrade in 2019 also included improvements to how clients and cases are recorded, tracked, categorized, and counted. Due to these improvements and the data clean-up efforts implemented along with the system change, the datasets from the previous system and the current system’s datasets are not comparable. Therefore, only datasets from the new system are publicly available.
- Individuals may be on more than one type of supervision at a time. In these cases, the following hierarchy is used to determine their case type for the purposes of this report:
 - Mandatory Supervision
 - Post Release Community Supervision
 - Formal Probation (Felony)
 - Formal Probation (Misdemeanor)

- The dataset includes all individuals with an open supervision case, including those in revoked status or with an outstanding warrant.
- The Department's previous data system had no built-in verification for address, city, or zip code. Therefore, address entries were subject to human error or allowed to be left blank. With the upgrade to Tyler Supervision, incorrectly entered or blank address entries will not be allowed. However, ACPD is undergoing a process to clean up the address data that was migrated to Tyler Supervision from the previous system. Until that clean-up is complete, the datasets will contain residential city information, but not zip codes or supervisory districts.
